INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 1 - Caring for the healthcare sector
1. Introduction 7
2. Care stories 8
   Patients’ unease
   Professionals’ discontent
   Common features
   Critical analyses of healthcare
3. The perspective of the ethics of care 17
4. The rationale of healthcare 20
   Rationality and reasonability
   Effects on professionalism
5. Re-ranking aims in healthcare 26
   A central place for the care-receiver

CHAPTER 2 - Arendt’s relevance for healthcare
1. Introduction 33
2. Arendt re-read in a new context 34
   Dr. Ollivier and his patient
   Reflections on “handeln”
3. The concept of “action” in the work of Arendt 39
   Labor, work, action, and love
   The ideal of the polis and the concept of politics
   Human life as “zöe” and “bios”
IV PROFESSIONAL LOVING CARE

4. Healthcare reinterpreted as a type of “action” 50
   Two types of equality
   Unique individuals
   No higher value than the continuation of “life”
   Unpredictability, the opposite of control
   Dr. Ollivier re-considered
5. Conclusion 64

CHAPTER 3 - The dominant professional repertoire in healthcare
1. Introduction 67
2. The logic of the repertoire of intervention 70
   Patients who experience that being helped is being objectified
   Decent healthcare should not be humiliating
   Doing something is often preferred over doing nothing
3. Professionals who question the repertoire of intervention 80
   Critical views on diagnosis, the starting point for intervening
   Diagnosing as patient listening
4. Diagnosing as looking through human beings 87
5. Conclusion 89

CHAPTER 4 - The professional repertoire of “presence”
1. Introduction 91
2. Shifting health contexts 92
   Parallel tendencies
3. The repertoire of presence in theory and practice 96
   Presence in practice
   Weak spots of the mainstream care offer
   The essence of presence
   The eight working principles in action
4. Implementing presence in welfare and nursing 109
   Professional concern for the weakest members of society
CHAPTER 5 - Professionals as fellow human beings

1. Introduction 127
2. Doctors as fellow human beings 129
   Institutional restrictions on the relational view
3. The cultural blurring of asymmetry 135
   Asymmetry in the ethics of care
   Allergy to inequality
   Asymmetry and the repertoire of presence
   Neediness on two sides
4. Dignified and lovable 145
   Overvaluation of autonomy
   Conclusion

CHAPTER 6 - Professional responsibility re-defined

1. Introduction 153
2. Responsibility for refraining from action 156
   Active hurting versus absence of giving help
   Victims are not the only ones who suffer
3. It is the capacity to act that makes one responsible 161
4. Feeling responsible 163
5. Geography of responsibilities 166
   Male ideas on the moral self
   Intended and practiced nearness of professionals
   Gender and responsibility
6. Institutional dimensions of professional responsibility 172
   Conclusion
CHAPTER 7 - Professionals are vulnerable and precious too

1. Introduction 181
   A case of professional and personal responsibility
2. The Christian tradition: late modern echoes of self-sacrifice 183
   Some objections
3. The ideal of authenticity: help only when being moved 190
   Critical reflections
4. Personal and institutional dimensions of PLC 197

EPILOGUE - The politics of Professional Loving Care 201

LITERATURE 205

INDEX 211