Abstract	xxi
Introduction.....	xxiii
Overview and Aims	xxiii
Chronology.....	xxiv
Chapter One : Theory and Methods	1
I.1. Archaeological Theory.....	1
I.1.1. Theoretical approaches to the study of Minoan material culture	1
I.1.2. ‘Text in context’: the linguistic nature of material culture	1
I.1.3. Using context to constrain interpretation.....	3
I.1.4. The process of interpretation.....	4
I.2. Approach to interpreting the vessels	4
I.2.1. Contextual analysis.....	4
I.2.2. The subjective nature of the definition of context.....	7
I.2.3. Interpretation of material culture meanings.....	7
I.2.4. Formulation of narrative scenarios.....	9
I.3. Approach to investigating the inscriptions	10
I.3.1. Duhoux’s methodology for decipherment.....	10
I.3.2. The etymological method of recovering meaning.....	13
I.3.3. The combinatorial method of recovering meaning.....	14
I.3.4. Analysis by letters, or by numbers?	15
Chapter Two : Framework for Interpreting the Vessels	17
II.1. Sites yielding inscribed stone vessels	17
II.1.1. Extra-urban sanctuaries	17
II.1.1.1. Petsofas	17
II.1.1.2. Iouktas	28
II.1.1.3. Vrysinas	34
II.1.1.4. Ayios Georgios (Kythera)	36
II.1.1.5. Psychro (Upper Grotto).....	39
II.1.1.6. Kato Syme.....	50
II.1.2. Other sites	59
II.1.2.1. Knossos.....	59
II.1.2.2. Apodoulou	62
II.1.2.3. Roussolakkos	62
II.1.2.4. Prasa	64
II.1.2.5. Troullos	66

II.2. Typologies and distributions.....	67
II.2.1. Warren’s typology of libation tables.....	68
II.2.2. Muhly’s typology of libation tables	69
II.2.3. Distribution of libation tables by form	71
II.2.4. Distribution of libation tables by material.....	73
II.2.5. Distribution of libation tables by period of context.....	74
II.2.6. Typology of ladles	75
II.2.7. Distribution of ladles	76
II.2.8. Typology of co-finds for libation tables and ladles at extra-urban sanctuaries.....	81
II.2.9. Typology of Minoan archaeological contexts implying libation.....	84
II.3. Minoan and Mycenaean iconographic evidence for libation	87
II.4. Conclusions.....	97
Chapter Three : Interpretations of the Vessels	99
III.1. Interpretations of libation.....	99
III.1.1. Interpretation of contexts suggesting Minoan ritual libation	99
III.1.1.1. Inverted cups.....	99
III.1.1.2. Receptacles with drains.....	99
III.1.1.3. Portable non-draining receptacles	100
III.1.1.4. Fixed non-draining receptacles	103
III.1.2. The directional element of libation	103
III.1.3. Relationships between vessel-types and liquids	104
III.1.4. Summary	106
III.2. Interpretations of libation receptacles	107
III.2.1. What does their distribution mean?.....	107
III.2.2. What is the reason for their shape?.....	108
III.2.3. Who used them?	109
III.2.4. What was the nature of the rituals they were used in?	109
III.2.5. What did they hold?	111
III.2.6. What became of their contents?	112
III.3. Interpretations of ‘ladles’	112
III.3.1. What does their distribution mean?.....	113
III.3.2. How were they held?	113
III.3.3. What is the reason for their shape?.....	115
III.3.4. Who used them?	116
III.3.5. How were they filled?	116
III.3.6. What liquid did they hold?	116
III.3.7. What was the destination of their contents?	118
III.3.8. How could their use have come to be male-gendered?	121
III.3.9. Did the inscribed examples have a special use?.....	122
III.3.10. How might the inscriptions be interpreted?	122
III.4. Conclusion: Narrative scenarios.....	125
III.4.1. Scenario 1	126
III.4.2. Scenario 2	128
III.4.3. Scenario 3	130
III.4.4. Scenario 4	133
III.4.5. Scenario 5	137

Chapter Four : Framework for Investigating Linear A.....	143
IV.1. Overview of the Aegean scripts.....	143
IV.1.1. Linear A.....	144
IV.1.1.1. Summary of the corpus.....	144
IV.1.1.2. Structure of the syllabary.....	144
IV.1.1.3. Standard editions.....	145
IV.1.2. Related scripts.....	146
IV.1.2.1. Linear B.....	146
IV.1.2.2. The Cypriot Syllabary.....	149
IV.1.2.3. Cretan Hieroglyphic.....	151
IV.1.2.4. Cypro-Minoan.....	152
IV.1.3. Prospects for decipherment.....	156
IV.2. The linguistic context of Minoan.....	157
IV.2.1. Family typology of regional languages.....	157
IV.2.1.1. Afroasiatic languages.....	158
IV.2.1.2. Indo-European languages.....	158
IV.2.1.3. Other languages.....	159
IV.2.2. Morphological typologies of regional languages.....	159
IV.2.2.1. Parameter 2: Flexivity.....	160
IV.2.2.2. Parameter 3: Fusion.....	161
IV.2.2.3. Parameter 4: Exponence.....	163
IV.2.2.4. Parameter 5: Affixation.....	165
IV.2.2.5. Parameter 6: Order of Subject, Verb, and Object.....	168
IV.2.2.6. Summary and discussion.....	172
IV.3. Archaeogenetic evidence for the character of Minoan.....	175
IV.3.1. Archaeological evidence for population influxes.....	175
IV.3.2. Genetic evidence for population influxes.....	176
IV.3.3. Discussion of the evidence.....	177
IV.3.4. Linguistic implications.....	178
IV.3.5. Is Minoan one language, or many?.....	179
IV.4. Other sources of information about the Minoan language.....	182
IV.4.1. Mari documents.....	182
IV.4.2. Egyptian documents.....	182
IV.4.2.1. The Aegean toponym list at Kom el-Hetan.....	182
IV.4.2.2. The ‘spell in the language of Keftiu’.....	185
IV.4.2.3. The writing-board with ‘names of Keftiu’.....	187
IV.4.3. Pre-Greek words and onomastica.....	188
IV.5. Past Work on Linear A.....	189
IV.5.1. Verifications of phonetic values.....	189
IV.5.2. Etymological treatments of Linear A.....	190
IV.5.3. Contextual analyses of Linear A.....	190
IV.5.4. Summary: Current thought on the nature of the Minoan language.....	191
IV.6. Conclusions.....	191
Chapter Five : Linguistic Analysis of Linear A.....	193
V.1. Introduction.....	193
V.2. Phonology: the values of the Linear A syllabograms.....	193

V.2.1.	The values of Linear A < p, t, k >	193
V.2.1.1.	The nature of voicing and aspiration in Minoan	193
V.2.1.2.	Evidence for allophonic aspiration	196
V.2.1.3.	Evidence for allophonic voicing	199
V.2.1.4.	Implications for the representation of Greek stops in Linear B	202
V.2.2.	The value of Linear A < d >	204
V.2.2.1.	Pronunciation and derivation of Δίκη / Δίκτυνα	206
V.2.2.2.	Evidence for an unvoiced allophone of Linear A < d >	208
V.2.2.3.	Further implications for the representation of Greek stops in Linear B	211
V.2.2.4.	Implications for the representation of Greek stops in the Cypriot Syllabary	212
V.2.2.5.	Conclusions	214
V.2.3.	The value of Linear A < p ₂ >	214
V.2.3.1.	Conclusions	219
V.2.4.	The value of Linear A < z >	220
V.2.4.1.	The Mycenaean pronunciation of Linear B < z >	220
V.2.4.2.	The relationship between Linear B < z > and Linear A < z >	222
V.2.4.3.	The Minoan pronunciation of Linear A < z >	223
V.2.4.4.	Velar-fronting in Mycenaean Greek	225
V.2.4.5.	The Minoan pronunciation of Linear A < z > (revisited)	226
V.2.4.6.	The Minoan phoneme behind Linear A < z >	230
V.2.4.7.	Evidence for a voiced allophone	230
V.2.5.	The value of Linear A < r >	232
V.2.6.	The values of Linear A < j, w >	234
V.2.7.	The values of Linear A < m, n >	235
V.2.8.	The value of Linear A < s >	235
V.2.8.1.	Evidence for a voiced allophone	236
V.2.9.	The values of Linear A < q, n ₂ , r ₂ , t ₂ >	236
V.2.9.1.	Evidence for voiced or aspirated allophones of Linear A < q, t ₂ >	237
V.2.9.2.	A possible orthographic variant of Linear A < t ₂ >	239
V.2.10.	The values of Linear A < a, e, i, o, u >	240
V.2.10.1.	Reduction of Linear A < u > before labials	242
V.2.11.	Summary: the sounds of Minoan	243
V.3.	Morphology: statistical indications of affixation	246
V.3.1.	Background: the work of Packard (1974)	246
V.3.2.	Control: statistical analysis of Linear B	252
V.3.2.1.	Repeating Packard's analysis on the new database to verify comparability of databases	252
V.3.2.2.	Creating a syllable-specific control analysis of Linear B	255
V.3.2.3.	Control analysis of Linear B: Conclusions	260
V.3.3.	Statistical analysis of Linear A	261
V.3.3.1.	Global analysis of Linear A	261
V.3.3.2.	Syllable-specific analysis of Linear A	262
V.3.4.	Statistical analysis of Linear A: Conclusions	264
V.4.	Orthography: spelling of word-internal clusters	266

V.5. Syntax: the word-order of the 'libation formula'	269
V.5.1. Summary: word-order in Minoan.....	276
V.6. Conclusion	277
